Jacqueline Gooding is the Human Resources Officer for the International Association of Chiefs of Police. She joined the IACP in 2001 after holding positions of HR Director and Manager at two other non-profit associations.

With more than twenty-five years human resources and benefits experience she is responsible for the hands on strategic planning, directing and coordination of the many aspects of the association’s day-to-day human resources. Jacqueline’s specialty focuses on benefit design, legislation, compliance and cost analysis, recruitment, employee relations, compensation and pension plan implementation and management. She has worked with both non-union and union staff, participating in collective bargaining processes and arbitrations.

Jacqueline holds a degree in Business Management from Howard University and continues ongoing training through the SHRM and IFEBP organizations.

Serving the Leaders of Today, Developing the Leaders of Tomorrow